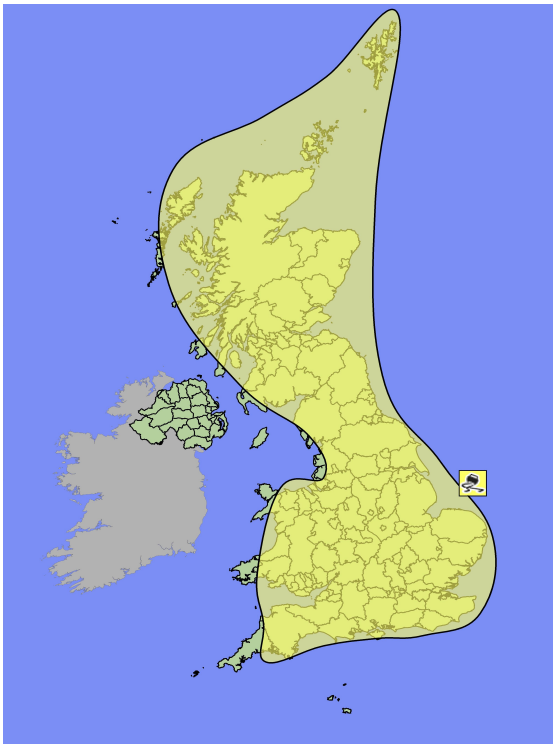
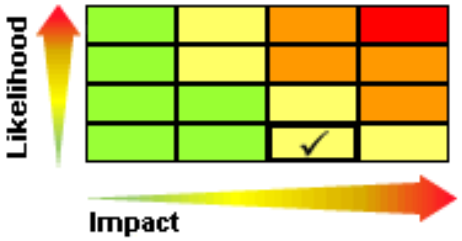
National Severe Weather Warning Service





Chief Forecasters Assessment
Sleet and snow showers will continue to move southeast across the Midlands and southeastern parts of England over the next few hours, with some wintry showers also fringing eastern coastal counties of England for a time. A further band of wintry showers, currently across northwest Scotland, will move southeast during the rest of Sunday with a few showers reaching central and eastern parts of England overnight. Meanwhile, clear spells across central and eastern areas of the UK will allow a widespread frost to develop.

Thus, there is a risk of ice in many areas again during Sunday evening and night, but temperatures will rise above zero across many western parts by the early hours of Monday.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Warning of Ice

Valid from 12:00 on Sun, 18th Dec 2011 until 11:00 on Mon, 19th Dec 2011

Frost and ice is likely to reform on roads and pavements across many parts of the UK during Sunday evening and overnight. The public should be aware of the risk of disruption to travel.
